A good test should:

- have a positive effect on learning, and improve learning habits.
- aim at locating the areas of difficulties experienced by the class or the individual student so that assistance and corrective work can be implemented.
- enable the teacher to find out which parts of the program cause difficulty for the class so that the teacher can evaluate the effectiveness of the syllabus as well as the methods and materials he or she is using.
- motivate by measuring student performance without in any way setting "ruses" for them.
- provide an opportunity for students to show their ability to perform tasks.
- be constructed with the goal of having students learn from their weaknesses.

In a well-developed essay, (Font 12 Times New Roman, line spacing 1.15), account for the characteristics of a good language test.
